"Pass me the sports"

BYU students come up with a new way of ignoring the introductions of opposing team members in the Cougars' bout with the University of Utah Utes Saturday night in the Marriott Center. When the introduction of the Utes began, a large section of the Cougar stands raised copies of local newspapers and began "ignoring" the proceedings on the floor.

However, when the introductions of the Cougars began the crowd came alive, and, according to one student, it was five minutes before the announcer could continue with the presentation of the Cougar team.

The Cougars, playing before a record Marriott Center crowd (23,006), defeated the Utes 76-50. For full details of the game see story page 7.

Chinese ending Vietnam attack

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — China's attack on Vietnam was reported stopped about six miles inside the border Monday and Western intelligence sources said some Chinese units may be pulling back.

Vietnam said it inflicted heavy casualties on the Chinese, killing 3,500 troops and destroying more than 100 tanks since the invasion started Saturday.

The Voice of Vietnam, monitored in Bangkok, said the Vietnamese killed 1,000 Chinese troops and destroyed 30 tanks in the rugged mountain province of Hoang Lien Son and reported similar figures in Cao Bang province.

In Long Son province, Vietnam claimed 600 Chinese killed and 20 tanks destroyed and said the strategic "Friendship Gate" border area was littered with some 60 destroyed Chinese tanks. Fighting was reported in other northern provinces as well. The reports could not be independently verified.

The Vietnamese Embassy in Bangkok said the Chinese advanced no more than six miles into Vietnam.

Peking has said the attack was in retaliation for "armed incursions" by Vietnam over the past year.

A quick strike followed by withdrawal would be similar to China's 1962 action in northeast India, when China invaded to make its point in a border dispute, then pulled back.

The official Chinese news agency Hsinhua has carried little about the invasion and no detailed reports of the fighting. Japanese news reports from Peking said China banned all demonstrations concerning the war.

Bangkok sources discounted reports of continued Chinese air strikes deep into Vietnam. Thai intelligence said the only Chinese planes still involved were spotter planes directing Chinese artillery fire.

A dispute between China and Vietnam has simmered since the communists took over Vietnam in 1975. It has increased over the past year with China accusing Vietnam of mistreating ethnic Chinese, and with Vietnam's backing of the overthrow of the China-backed Cambodian government of Pol Pot.

A U.N. spokesman said Kuwait Ambassador Abdalla Bishara, the Security Council chairman for February, was consulting particularly with nonaligned nations.

Sunday, Moscow warned China to withdraw its troops "before it is too late" and said it would honor a peace and friendship treaty signed last November with Vietnam.

The United States said Sunday it disapproved of the invasion and asked the Soviets to use restraint. Government spokesmen said there was no reason to believe American interests were directly threatened.

The nine members of the European Common Market expressed concern over "the serious consequences for international relations."

In Paris Monday, Vietnam's ambassador to France, Vo Van Sung, said the invasion had the "tacit approval" if not the "complicity" of the United States and linked it to the recent American visit of Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping. "An attitude of American encouragement" was clear, Sung said at a news conference.

Cambodia, after signing a 25-year treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation with Vietnam on Sunday, condemned China's attack as a "scheme aimed at saving the Pol Pot corpse."

Soviets shun Asian conflict

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin appeared to be staying out of the Chinese-Vietnamese conflict Monday after issuing a statement conspicuously void of possible Soviet moves against Peking. However, the Soviets were said to have put their army on alert and canceled leaves.

The key phrase in Sunday's Kremlin statement of support for Vietnam was, "the heroic Vietnamese people .... are capable of standing up for themselves."

This was followed by the reminder that Vietnam has "reliable friends" and the warning to Peking to "stop before it is too late." The statement fell short of suggesting direct Soviet intervention.

Monday, the Chinese advance seemed to have stopped and it appeared the Kremlin might not have to consider the options its statement left open.

Reports from Hanoi indicated the Chinese had halted three to six miles inside Vietnam as they had indicated they might in their statement. Their attack was a punitive one intended to "teach Vietnam a lesson."

Moscow reports were circulating that the Soviet military had been put on alert and that leaves were canceled because of fighting in Asia. The Soviet Defense Ministry's foreign desk, when asked about the report, said Monday night, "we do not give out such information."

However, Soviet journalist Victor Louis, often an unofficial pipeline for leaks, reported in the London Evening News that the army has been put in combat readiness and that troops were being called back from leave. He said in response to a telephone query that such alerts are not unsual here.

The Soviet statement, which came amid a barrage of anti-Chinese propaganda, demonstrations outside the Chinese embassy and rallies at institutes and factories around the country, said the Soviet Union will "honor its treaty obligations" with Vietnam.

As a rallying cry, the Kremlin has brought out an American protest slogan from the days of U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia: "Hands off Vietnam."

It was a statement the Kremlin had to make, just three-and-a-half months after signing a "treaty of friendship and cooperation" with Vietnam.

Executions open to media

ALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Despite s of sensationalism, the Utah se of Representatives Monday ed a bill allowing up to nine repor- to attend executions.

he first execution in the United es in a decade occurred in Utah in when Gary Gilmore was killed by ing squad.

o reporters were allowed to witness execution, but a promoter who hased Gilmore's life story was wed to view the condemned man's moments as his guest, primarily use of the financial deal he had e with Gilmore.

oponents of the bill said that ldn't be allowed to happen again. also said capital punishment d not be a deterrent to crime if le didn't know about its horrible cts.

oponents decried the invasion of acy and "circus atmosphere" they would result if the bill becomes Until 1961, reporters routinely at- ed executions in Utah.

"The media hype will still be there," said Rep. Rob Bishop, D-Brigham City. He tried a facetious amendment to require the Division of State History to film or videotape the execution, then sell copies for showing in public schools, prisons and elsewhere.

"I won't be so crass as to ask you to vote for this amendment," Bishop said, "but if this is a good bill, this is a good amendment."

Rep. Merrill Harward, R-Salt Lake, said he felt the only interest the news media had in an execution was to sensationalize it. He said television is especially guilty of focusing attention on human emotions that should be private.

"Where does the right to privacy end and the right of the public to know begin?" Harward asked. "Will we follow principles of human dignity, or give in to the baser urge to participate in gossip?"

The bill specifically bans cameras and recording equipment from the site of an execution until after the condemned man has been killed and the body removed.

"The more we publicize it, the quicker people will want to abolish capital punishment," said Rep. Roger Rawson, D-Hooper, who spoke against the bill because he said he favors the death penalty.

Rawson asked if perhaps the state ought to give the condemned man the right to exclude reporters from his own execution.

Blind Y student 'sighted'

By D. SCOTT SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

Kent McGregor, a senior in broadcast communications from Boise, Idaho, says the toughest challenge as a blind student at BYU is "getting around campus."

A student since fall 1975, McGregor says he could now give directions to virtually any building on campus.

McGregor said he was brought up "sighted," having attended public schools all his life and growing up with brothers and sisters who had their eyesight.

"I wanted to go on a mission," said McGregor, "but the church's policy is in opposition to that." He said "at first I didn't understand it, and I was a little bit offended that they wouldn't let me go on a mission."

McGregor says he is in support of the church's policy, realizing that "it would take a real understading companion, and besides," he said, "you can be on a mission every day of your life."

McGregor said he is a "22-year long member," adding in jest, "I'm a bishop's kid, you know."

"I have read the Book of Mormon six times, the Doctrine and Covenants three times, the Pearl of Great Price six times, the Old Testament once, and the New Testament twice," he said. McGregor owns copies of all these except the New Testament in braille.

Referring to his love life, McGregor said, "I'm kind of everybody's friend, and nobody's lover. I have many really good friends that I can call up and go out with, and if the opportunity ever presents itself, I'll go for it." McGregor said he feels blindness should not curtail one's dating activity.

McGregor discussed some of the false notions about the blind. "Because a person is blind," he said, "it does not mean that his hearing or his other senses are necessarily more acute.

"Many will say that the blind have this sixth sense, where they can instinctively walk around. I don't have that sixth sense. My philosophy is that you walk forward in as high a speed as your cane will allow, and if you hit something, hit it hard enough to knock it over and make a major production out of it."

McGregor said that a lot of people have the misconception that blind people are extraordinary musicians. "I played in a couple of rock groups," he said, "and play classical piano, but I don't think it is necessarily related to my blindness."

McGregor said blindness is not the worst thing that could happen to a person. "I have been blind for 22 years, and I can't agree that it is so bad. I believe that blindness, while it is a handicap, and while it is unrealistic not to refer to it as a handicap, need not be a totally handicapping condition."

McGregor attributes modern technology to the reduction of the "handicapping" aspects of blindness. "I am going to have an operation this summer," he said, "which may give me five percent of my

Iranians burn U.S. consulate

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Unidentified "counter-revolutionary elements" set fire to the U.S. consulate Monday in the northwestern Iranian city of Tabriz, the city's state-run radio reported. The one American assigned to the post had left Tabriz on Sunday, U.S. officials said.

Amid other reports of disorder, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini warned he would crush any "bandits" causing trouble and view their activities as an uprising against his new Islamic republic.

Tabriz Radio, now in the hands of supporters of the ayatollah, appealed to local citizens to put out the fire at the consulate.

Israel to hear U.S. peace plans

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli delegation to the Israel-Egypt peace talks at Camp David hopes to hear new American proposals for reaching a peace treaty, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said Monday before departing for the United States.

The Americans took the initiative in renewing the negotiations between Israel and Egypt, Dayan told an airport news conference.

Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil and his six-man delegation to the talks was en route to London on his way to the United States for the talks with Dayan and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

African pirates attack U.S. ship

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — About 300 Maldive islands pirates attacked a U.S.-owned oceanographic survey ship in the Indian Ocean, looting the vessel and kidnapping at least one crew member, radio reports from the ship said Monday.

The vessel, a sister ship of oceanographer Jacques Cousteau's Calypso, was headed for the U.S. Navy facility on the island of Diego Garcia on Monday.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Offduty firemen joined striking police on picket lines Monday, as National Guardsmen in jeeps patrolled a city denied its traditional Mardi Gras parades.

Meanwhile, new talks opened aimed at ending the walkout by police, who want their Teamsters Union bargaining unit to include ranking officers. They also are demanding that the mayor agree to binding arbitration.

With the remainder of the Mardi Gras celebrations hanging in the balance, the city Civil Service Commission opened a hearing on the policemen's wage and benefits demands.

Storm paralyzes eastern cities

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A blinding holiday snowstorm born in one of the bitterest winters on record virtually paralyzed much of the Northeast on Monday, spoiling George Washington's birthday.

The nation's capital was buried under its heaviest snowfall in more than half a century, with accumulations up to 2 feet, and traffic was practically at a standstill, except for a few cross-country skiers.

The near-blizzard storm, which had wrought havoc on Sunday in the ill-prepared South, causing at least 13 deaths there, bore down on the big cities of the urban East, blocking roads, grounding airplanes, and halting trains.

Injunction extended

Star Palace conforming to fire cod

By NANCY BENAC
Universe Staff Writer

The Star Palace discotheque can legally stay open while repairs are being made to bring it into compliance with city building regulations.

Co-owner Brent Weeks said Delta Fire Sprinkler Company is now in the process of installing a sprinkler system.

When contacted on Friday, Stan Robinson, a designer for the company, said, "I think we can be done by March 15."

Robinson said the sprinkler system will entail connecting an underground water line from the building to the Provo City water main and hooking up a system of valves, alarms and piping to the required sprinkler heads. One sprinkler is required for approximately every 130 square feet, he said.

Judge George E. Ballif read a prepared statement in Fourth District Court Friday which extended the restraining order allowing the business to remain open until March 15, the same day repairs must be completed, said Glen Ellis, Provo city attorney.

"The judge read something that was predecided ... The whole thing only lasted about two minutes," said R. A. Dalrymple, Provo city building inspector. "There was no hearing and no one got to say anything.

"I don't feel it's quite right. They should have been made to comply with the law like anyone else."

Co-owner Weeks said, "They stipulated that if we get everything in by March 15, the city will drop the case. As long as our patrons are happy and the city is happy, I'm happy."

In addition to the required sprinkler system, the Provo building inspection department had earilier notified the disco of eight other structural deficiencies, such as no fire retardent on some of the raw wood in the building.

"Most of the repairs are already done," Weeks said. "We should be completely done half a month before the deadline."

"We encouraged them to get the restraining order ... It's a simple matter," Ellis said. "He (Weeks) just ignored us like a lot of others do."

"There's no greater chance of a fire breaking out there than in any other building, but if there was one, it could have catastrophic, [illegible] reaching results," continued.

Mormon influence on TV to be discussed in lecture

A former producer-director for KUTV in Salt Lake City will be the speaker for a communications colloquium at BYU today.

Norman Tarbox, associate professor of communications, will discuss "Mormon Influence on the Growth of Public TV in Utah" in 170 JKBA at noon.

Tarbox recently completed a four-year study of public TV in Utah, tracing the development of non-commercial television within the state.

He said events surrounding the establishment of educational TV in Utah were unique because of the "uncommon environmental factors" involved. His remarks in the colloquium will center on one environmental factor - the Mormon influence in Utah.

Tarbox said the environmental factors in Utah made the rivalries between contending groups and agencies on both sides of the public TV debate extremely intense. When public TV channels (VHF) were allocated for the states, Utah received only one, but at one time there were five public TV stations operating simultaneously in the state.

"Initial cooperative efforts for the development of Utah's single VHF noncommercial television channel did occur," Tarbox said.

High school debaters invade campus

By JOSEPH WALKER
Universe Staff Writer

BYU students brave enough to enter the HFAC Friday and Saturday probably encountered a rather unusual situation.

Instead of the quiet and serenity one has to come to expect at BYU, students were confronted by hundreds of smooth-faced adolescents, mumbling in the halls, playing poker in the lobbies, and loudly berating "insidiously insipid" judges.

No, BYU had not slipped into the "Twilight Zone." Nor was it a rehearsal for BYU's version of "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest," although that might have been the best guess at first glance.

It was the invasion of more than 500 participants in the annual Cougar Forensics Classic, sponsored by the BYU Forensics Department for high school speech and drama students.

Each year, debaters, orators, extemporaneous speakers, impromptu speakers, legislators and interpreters gather on campus from more than 75 Rocky Mountain high schools, looking dapper in their finest apparel, to compete for the nearly five-foot tall sweepstakes trophies, as well as awards for the winners of each of the various areas of competition.

Don Black of the BYU Forensics Department said, "Colleges and universities across the country sponsor similar tournaments each year to give local high school students an opportunity to improve themselves by competing on a high level. A high school just doesn't have the facilities to operate a tournament of this magnitude. We do it as a service to the high schools."

Another member of the BYU debate squad said, "We really don't have much of an opportunity to 'scout' for talent, since most of us are pretty busy running the tournament. But we usually get a chance to check out some of the final rounds, which is generally where the kids we are interested in will be, anyway."

"The Cougar Classic is always one of the most efficiently run tournaments of the year," said Dennis Ferrin, debate coach at Layton High School. "Our kids always look forward to coming here."

Local merchants look forward to the tournament, also. Most schools find it easier to stay overnight in Provo for the two-day competition than to commute between their homes and the BYU campus. Local motels, restaurants and places of entertainment all are happy to welcome the high school teams.

The people who are the most pleased about the tournament, though, are those who emerge victorious. This year, it was Timpview High School on top in both debate and individual events competitions, and Roy High School winning among student legislators. Runner-up high schools in the different categories were Bingham in debate, Provo in individual events, and Davis, Bingham and Layton in the student congress.

And so, with the Cougar Forensics Classic once again history, the halls of BYU can return to normalcy, with that pervading quiet and serenity. Quiet, that is, until April, when the high schoolers once again invade the HFAC for the annual Utah State Drama Festival.

Murder suspect to undergo tests

By RICHARD BURGSTROM
Universe Staff Writer

A 4th District Court judge Friday ordered that Kelvin J. Crane, 25, shall receive psychological evaluation to judge whether he is competent to stand trial for the shotgun murder of his roommate, BYU student Jon Bruce Deardeuff.

Judge David Sam has postponed Crane's arraignment until after a 30-day evaluation at the Utah State Mental Hospital, when a hearing will be set to consider Crane's mental condition.

Ivan Lawrence, Crane's defense attorney, described him as having had a "withdrawn personality for the past 10 to 15 years of his life." Crane, present at the hearing, has been in the Utah State Mental Hospital since Feb. 9, when his parents became concerned about his condition in the county jail. Officials transferred him to the hospital after a psychiatrist described Crane as being "very depressed, psychotic, and appearing ill."

He is accused of murdering Deardeuff Jan. 11 while Deardeuff was asleep in his room. Dr. John W. Graham, Utah State medical examiner, said Deardeuff was shot twice with a shotgun and died from a shot to the head.

During the hearing, Lawrence asked Judge Sam to allow Crane to stay in the hospital after the evaluation instead of being returned to the jail, which he said lacked proper medical facilities. Sam denied the request, saying the decision would be premature.

Lawrence described Crane as having a "long history of mental illness, including some efforts at suicide." He said past diagnostic impressions of Crane show him as schizophrenic, catatonic with paranoid features, with a long-standing schizoid personality.

According to Lawrence, Crane accepted a call to serve on a full time mission for the LDS Church to the Uruguay-Paraguay Mission in May 1974. He served for a little less than one month, when he was released at his own request.

After returning to his home in Medford, Ore., Crane enlisted in the Air Force, but was honorably discharged two weeks later as psychologically unfit for Air Force duty.

Once Crane sliced his wrists with a kitchen knife in the presence of his mother, Lawrence said. For the past several years he has been on psychotic medication.

In 1977 Crane's family moved to Utah, against the advice of his psychiatrist, Dr. H. H. Shapiro. His parents felt he would do better if he were treated by people of his own religion, Lawrence said.

From Jan. 26 until Feb. 24, 1977, Crane received treatment at the Timpanogos Community Mental Health Center.

On the night of the shooting, police responded to a call for a paramedic and found Crane at his apartment. A shotgun, which had been fired, was on the couch.

Provo police arrested Crane that night.

Free fall jump at 120 mph 'most exciting, exhilarating'

By TIM WOODLAND
Universe Staff Writer

Floating through the sky in a free fall jump at 120 miles per hour is one of "the most exciting and exhilarating things I've ever done," Tanya Stringham, adviser for the BYU Skydiving Club, said.

Ms. Stringham has been skydiving for a year and a half and has completed 140 "thrilling" jumps. With this experience, she is qualified to be the club's adviser.

Most people are frightened at the thought of the initial jump, the adviser said. Speaking of her first jump, Ms. Stringham added, "I wasn't as nervous as I thought I would be. I was too busy concentrating on what I was supposed to do."

There really isn't anything to worry about in jumping," Ms. Stringham said. "However, there is no room for carelessness or showing off."

The first five jumps are "static jumps," where a cord is attached to the plane and will automatically open the parachute for the jumper. After the fifth fall, the jumper is then allowed to pull his own rip cord with supervision from a "jumpmaster," a person who has been trained and certified by the U.S. Parachute Association.

The jumpmaster is with the student on his first 18 jumps. After that, the student begins "relative work." This involves the student's movements and positioning in the sky, Ms. Stringham said. One form of relative work involves several jumpers, who work on their style at the same altitude.

"Skydiving is a mental sport, not a physical sport," the five-foot-tall adviser said. In fact, she says, "very little strength is required." The sport is "just as much for females as for males."

"The club exists to help those who are interested in jumping," Ms. Stringham said. "We teach students how to exit from a plane, how to land, how to control the parachute as well as how to handle a malfunction. It's really a very concentrated class."

The students also learn how to pack their own parachutes. Every jumper is required to carry a "reserve parachute" which must be packed by a "licensed rigger" to insure safety.

"As a club, we jump all year long," Ms. Stringham said. "It's just like any other winter sport. As long as you're dressed properly it's warm, even in the winter." The club jumps every Saturday at Cedar Valley Skydiving Center, about 10 miles west of Lehi.

The fee for joining the club is $60 and includes a semester's membership in the club, ground training, the first jump, as well as equipment rental. Club membership also entitles the member to participate in all the activities during the semester as well as the use of the club equipment. Students interested in skydiving, or joining the club, are invited to contact Ms. Stringham at 221 University Press Building (UPB), or call ext. 4711.

Roy Perkins, a sophomore from Charlottesville, Ind., majoring in dustrial education, nears his landing after his first attempt at parachu jumping.

Coal operations topic of lecture

The use of coal slurry in standard pipeline operations will be the topic of a Sigma XI lecture today at 12 noon in 357 ELWC.

Richard W. Hanks, professor of chemical engineering, will read the Sigma XI Research Society Paper of the Month entitled "The Influence of Slurry Rheology on Turbulent Pipeline Hydraulics."

The BYU chapter of Sigma XI, the Scientific Research Society of North America, sponsors the monthly lecture series to encourage scientific research, Hanks said.

There are numerous problems associated with the use of coal, he said, including converting it to gas or liquid and transporting it. "A coal slurry consists of a suspension of 40 to 55 percent of finely ground coal with a consistency like face powder in water. This suspension may be pumped through a pipeline like any liquid," he said.

Hanks, a former resident of Salt Lake City, received a bachelor's degree in 1957 from Yale University and a Ph.D. in chemical engineering from the University of Utah in 1960.

Hanks has published articles in professional journals and served as a consultant on research projects related to fluid mechanics and the transport of liquid forms of minerals.

The public is invited to attend the lecture.

Boats, motors, bridges part of Engineers Week

BYU's student engineers will have a chance to show off their talents this week as they race Alka-Seltzer powered boats and wind powered cars, smash balsa wood bridges and display new electrical motor designs.

President Carter has designated Feb. 18-24 as "National Engineers Week." The BYU College of Engineering Science and Technology has followed suit by scheduling a week full of activities illustrating the national theme, "Engineers - People Bringing Purpose to Progress."

BYU's Engineering Week will begin today with engineering-technology displays in the ELWC Stepdown Lounge and the Commons Area of the Clyde Building. About 65 engineering students have created displays exhibiting everything from home computer systems to a 17 foot concrete canoe that actually floats and will be raced in an intercollegiate competition. The students' projects will be displayed through Thursday.

Friday afternoon the Alka-Seltzer powered boats will line up at the starting line in the Stepdown Lounge. The boats will race for three meters carrying a cargo of 100 milliliters of water. Winners will be determined by the volume of water safely delivered, the speed of the boat and the number of Alka-Seltzer tablets used.

Following the boat race, the Mechanical Engineering Department will race vehicles powered only by stored wind energy. The student designed vehicles must complete a 10-foot course and the winner will be determined by speed and the total distance traveled.

The balsa wood bridges will then be demolished in an attempt to find the one which will withstand the most pressure. A hydraulic press will test the structures, created from 3/32 inch square balsa wood.

Engineering Week will be concluded Saturday evening with a banquet in Salt Lake City sponsored by the National Society of Professional Engineers. Students and faculty are invited to participate in the banquet and tickets are available in room 278 CB.

Randy Otteson, a forward for the Cougars, sharpens his game during the first competition of the new season. The Cougars will host the WAC invitational in April.

Cougars take honors at indoor tournament

The Cougar varsity soccer teams won first and third places in the annual Indoor Soccer Tourney held last weekend in the Smith Fieldhouse.

Eight teams from Provo, Salt Lake City, Orem, Ogden and Bountiful, participated in two days of action.

In the opening round on Friday night, the BYU "A" and "B" teams defeated the University of Utah and Provo while Weber State College edged Spanish of Provo. As expected, all the games were fast and full of action, including a high number of goals scored.

Both of BYU's teams averaged four goals per game. Cougar coach Jim Dusara said he was pleased with the passing and scoring of veterans Randy Otteson, Lance Black, Bruce Hoppe of the "A" team and Kevin Miller, Jimmy Ward, Vonn Black and Roy Clark.

Dusara said both Cougar teams "fought hard in the semifinal game, before it was decided in sudden death over time when "A" team's Glen Smith scored from the penalty mark."

In the final championship game between BYU's "A" team and Weber State, Smith and Lance Black scored one goal each in the first half. The Cougars later got two more goals, coming from Smith and Bruce Hoppe, to ice the victory.

"The main purpose of indoor soccer is to keep the players in good physical condition," Dusara said. "Our good condition helped us to win the final game over the tired Weber State team."

BYU played five games in all, two on Friday and three on Saturday. "There were 20 minutes per game, which equals 100 minutes of playing time between five players," Dusara said. "That is a good challenge for endurance."

"Both of the Cougar teams played a good brand of soccer," Dusara said. "We were passing the ball better and setting up the ball in good positions for shooting into the opponents' nets, taking 15 to 20 shots per game and scoring four to six goals, which is a very good percentage indeed," he said.

Although Dusara feels the players have great individual talent, he also thinks the squad needs more practice as a unit. "The players still need more practice playing together to understand the movement of the ball and to learn to move without the ball, moving into open spaces for attack or penetration into the opponent's goal mouth," he said.

The Beehive Boot competition and the WAC Invitational are scheduled for this spring. The Beehive Boot tourney will be in Logan March 30-31, and the WAC Invitational will be at BYU April 13-14.

Dusara said all students wanting to try out for the Soccer team should contact him in his office at 258 SFH, and those students who wish to play for P.E. credit or fun should sign up for P.E. 147 (beginning), or P.E. 148 for advanced players. Soccer classes are due to start next week.

Y warms up slowly in baseball openers

By LISA JOHNSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Cougar baseball team was a long time warming up this weekend in their season opener against the University of Nevada — Las Vegas, going 1-3 for the series. BYU lost its first three games 1-12, 6-7, 4-10, before the spark was ignited that set off a winning 8-0 explosion.

"The last game showed what an explosive team we can be," said Cougar Coach Gary Pullins. "But it seemed that when we were behind in the other games, we just shut down."

The only winning pitcher in the UNLV series was right-handed Bert Bradley. Bradley went four and 1/3 perfect innings before giving the Rebels their lone hit of the game. Southpaw Tyler Steinbach relieved Bradley in the seventh inning to complete the 8-0 shut out, and to hold the Rebel bats at bay.

The Cougars also showed some impressive woodwork in the finale of the bi-double header. Freshman Mark Adamiak, who guarded second base, belted the season's first and only homerun in the fourth inning. But he was not alone in his batting feats. Michael Render came in from left field to go 3-4 behind the plate, scoring two runs and bringing one man in, and Ken Clayton, who manned first base, went 3-5.

BYU wheels were in evidence throughout the game, as they stole four bases. Fielders Marc Thomas, Jeff Burton and Render, along with designated hitter Brad Swenson, were responsible for the swipes.

"I guess it's better to drop the first three and win the last one than to do it the other way around," Pullins said when discussing the first three Cougar losses. UNLV picked up the lead in the early innings of the first two games and never let up.

Friday's opener saw the Cougars retire Tom Moris from the mound after the third inning, eight hits and eight runs. John Botorff finished the last five innings, giving up nine hits and four runs.

BYU had four hits in that game, with right fielder Mike Davis hitting a double to bring Render in for the single Cougar run, finishing the game at 12-1.

"It wasn't just the pitching staff," Pullins remarked. "In the games where they scored so much on us, the defense didn't really back them up."

The defense especially ran into trouble in the second game of Friday's doubleheader, when the Cougars totaled seven errors. BYU was able to make up for its mistakes, however. The 6-6 score in the ninth necessitated an extra inning of play.

Thomas and catcher Len Tsuhako were responsible for two hits each, Burton smacked a double and Render accumulated two RBIs, while Clayton, designated hitter Stan Younger, Davis, Adamiak and shortstop Cliff Pastornicky also collected hits.

Hurler Greg Peterson threw the first five innings, the Rebels taking six hits and two runs, before Bill Pittson came in for two-plus innings, two hits and four runs. Rob Blyth finished the last two innings and bore the loss, giving up one hit and the game-winning Rebel run for a 7-6 finish in the 10th.

The first game of Saturday's doubleheader was no indication of the comeback the Cougars were to make in the following contest. The Cougars managed to score four runs to UNLV's 10, two of those runs brought in on two of catcher Murphy Sua's three hits, one of which was a double.

The Rebels got half their runs from pitcher Axle Hardy, who pitched five innings, and the other half from Scot Nebeker, who went the remaining three.

Pullins said he felt that by the fourth game the Cougars finally pulled it together. "They were beginning to get the feeling of a team concept — caring about the overall team rather than their personal averages or stats." he said.

Bert Bradley, the weekend's only Cougar pitcher to throw a win, shows the same style he used in Las Vegas, when he teamed with Tyler Steinbach for a shutout.

"I was disappointed with the two games UNLV scored so many runs," said Pullins of the series. "But I was very pleased with some personal performances, especially of Sua, Tsuhako, Adamiak and and Bradley."

In preparation for next weekend, when the Cougars return to Las Vegas for the UNLV tournament, Pullins said the Cougars would "mainly be working on some small fundamentals that we didn't execute too well." 'But hey,' he added, "just wait. We'll be up there yet."

Cougar netters successful in weekend tourney play

Both Cougar tennis teams posted victories this weekend. The women tied with UCLA for first place in the University of Arizona Invitational, and two men netters garnered the outstanding player awards for their team play at the University of Santa Barbara Team Tennis Classic.

Althougn UCLA defeated the top seeded women Cougars in the final match, 4-2, individual match totals showed the Cougars and the Bruins were even, thus resulting in a tournament tie.

The Cougars managed this first place finish without the services of two of their top four players, Tracy Tanner and Charlene Murphy, who were in Salsbury, Md., for the Indoor Collegiate Invitationals. Tanner was eliminated in preliminary rounds, and Murphy made it to the semifinals before she was defeated by Joyce Portman, 3-6, 3-6. Murphy was also awarded the outstanding sportsmanship award for the tournament.

Meanwhile, down in Santa Barbara, Cougars Eric Peterson and Tony Trear gained the top individual honors of the tournament for not losing a single match in the Cougars' four-meet stand. The Cougars, however, failed to win the tournament, placing second to Long Beach State, a team they had defeated earlier in the week.

Women's cage team ups winning streak

By CHUCK GATES
Universe Sports Writer

...four in a row, five in a row...

Looking for a good bet? Try the BYU women's basketball team. The Cougars proved they mean business the final half of the season, with a pair of weekend road wins over Wyoming, 88-59, Friday, and Colorado State, 101-72, Saturday.

By winning those two, the BYU team boosted its winning streak to five games. When coupled with weekend losses by Utah and Weber State, this creates a four-team tie for second place. Four teams have 7-2 league marks, behind Colorado's 9-0 record.

Head Coach Courtney Leishman was "pleased" with the play of his team over the weekend. He pointed to an "excellent defense" as the key factor in the Wyoming win, while overall play at both ends of the court, was the difference against Colorado State.

"I thought we played the zone well," said Leishman of the Cougar defense that held Wyoming's high scoring Rose Wisroth scoreless the entire contest. Of BYU's play against Colorado State the coach said, " we played a very intelligent game and shot exceptionally well."

The Cougars did shoot well against the Rams, pouring in 58 percent of their shots from the field. BYU also dominated the offensive and defensive boards, out-rebounding Colorado State 46-21.

Against Wyoming, Leishman praised the effort of the Y bench, as Jackie Beene and Judy Hunter combined for 33 points in the victory.

Tina Gunn also played her usual strong game both nights, collecting 26 points Friday and 23 points Saturday.

Wyoming

Outscoring Wyoming 20-4 during the opening four-minute stretch of the second half, BYU broke open a tight ball game and cruised to an 88-59 win.

Gunn's 26 points were tops for all scorers. Beene, playing "exceptionally well," in Leishman's words, scored 20 points. Rosemary Jensen tossed in 15 points and Hunter, who Leishman credited with playing her "best game of the year," added 13 in the winning effort. Gunn had 12 rebounds.

Colorado State

Five Cougars scored in double figures as BYU smashed the Rams 101-72.

The Cougars opened a 21-9 first half lead in the first nine minutes of play and built it to a 53-28 halftime advantage.

The Rams made a brief second half run, cutting the margin to 67-48 with about 12 minutes left but BYU held on for the win. Gunn's 23 points topped all scorers. Beene played another strong game, contributing 19 points. Jenny Cox was busy at both ends of the floor, collecting 14 points and 11 rebounds. Jeanette Weston tossed in 13 points and Karen Morlan picked up 12 points.

"I think Jerry did a very wise thing," BYU coach Frank Arnold said. "They would stand out there, pass the ball and then attack. That's why we changed to a man-to-man defense. I thought it was very good."

BYU jumped to an early lead, scoring eight points in the first three minutes of play while holding the Utes to only two. But a stubborn man-to-man Ute defense cut off the Cougar attack and Utah rallied to tie the score at 10 apiece.

With nine minutes remaining and the score tied at 14, BYU ran off 12 points, six from the free throw line, in five minutes, while holding the Utes to only two.

The second half belonged entirely to the Cougars, as foul problems forced Pimm to rotate his team in and out. Eighteen of Utah's 27 fouls were committed by the starting five.

BYU's starters all reached double figures before leaving the floor late in the game. Besides the efforts of the starting freshmen, center Alan Taylor scored 11 points, and Danny Ainge finished with 10 as did Scott Runia.

For BYU, it was the first victory over the Utes on the home court since 1972. The win boosted the Cougars into the driver's seat in the WAC and boosted their season record to 17-7. The loss forced Utah into second place with a 6-3 conference record and 17-8 record overall.

WAC player of the week

DENVER (AP) — Wyoming center Doug Bessert, who missed only one shot in almost single-handedly sparking the Cowboys to a pair of victories last week, is the WAC's basketball Player of the Week.

Other nominees were BYU Freshmen forwards Devin Durrant and Fred Roberts, Colorado State forward Kim Williamson, New Mexico forward Phil Abney, San Diego State center Steve Malovic and Texas-El Paso guard Gary Wilson.

LDS actor stars in film, TV series

By DOUG SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

Shawn Stevens, star of BYU Productions' latest movie, looks like any other aspiring actor. According to many fan magazines and groupie-oriented tabloids, though, he'll be the new Shawn Cassidy.

Stevens, who is LDS, is no stranger to the entertainment business. He recently appeared in a major motion picture, Running Free, to be aired soon, a TV special The Magic Castle with Orson Welles, and is currently the star of a new TV series, Wonderland Cove.

Universe photos by Dan Arsenault

Shawn Stevens, who is starring in a new BYU Productions movie, will be seen in a new TV series, Wonderland Cove. Stevens, who is a member of the LDS Church, has been heralded by teen magazines as the "New Shawn Cassidy."

The series, which Stevens said will air in the spring sometime, portrays a family of children whose parents were killed. The episodes evolve with the happenings of the young, parentless family trying to make it on their own.

Stevens, though he is a young actor, said he has paid his dues in the entertainment business, starting at an early age.

"When I was 6 years old my grandmother bought me season tickets to a community theater," said Stevens, "...she felt it would teach me patience, by having to wait from week-to-week for the next performance." Little did his grandmother know that she would be instrumental in creating the desire in him to act.

"When I was 12 years-old I started working at the Glendale Center Theater," Stevens said, "and this is where I was first introduced to the LDS Church."

He went on to explain that Ruth and Nathan Hale, the owners of the Glendale Center Theater, "two very special people," were the first people to introduce him to the Mormon Church and its teachings. Stevens didn't join the church at that point, though.

When Stevens entered high school he auditioned for and was cast in every play that the school presented. After graduation he said he worked in summer stock in Michigan. The stock company toured the U.S. with its productions. Later he joined the Young Americans, a nationally prominent singing group.

Stevens attended college for a short time but was coaxed by a drama coach to go into acting professionally.

Stevens later hired a personal manager who was LDS and she introduced him to Cam Clark. An LDS actor, Clark played a missionary in the California version of Saturday's Warrior.

"Cam taught me a lot about the gospel," Stevens said. He joined the church in 1977.

Stevens is currently involved with a BYU movie which deals with the feelings which are so prominent in today's family situations.

"This is the most powerful script we have ever done in a BYU production," said Peter Johnson, director of the movie. "This is not a Pollyanna type film, something that we have been accused of producing in the past. This is a strong story with a surprisingly dramatic ending."

The movie, which as yet has no title, is about the feelings a father and son experience when a successful father pushes his son to excel in sports. The father is more concerned with how he'll look or his reputation than he is about his son's feelings.

Peter Johnson, producer and director of BYU Productions' new movie, talks with Shawn Stevens, star of the as-yet-untitled film. "This is not a Pollyanna type film," Johnson says. "This is a strong story with a surprisingly dramatic ending."

The picture stars Shawn Stevens as Randy and Bob Clark as Randy's father, both experienced Hollywood actors.

Stevens said that the Hollywood life style is rough, but "...if people know I'm LDS they don't try to coax me to break my standards.

"You have to be careful of the people you hang around with and their influence. Friends in Tinseltown are difficult to meet and keep, because there are so many actors in Hollywood and it is easy for people to put up fronts. For that reason you have to be careful with whom you associate," he said.

"Girl friends are especially hard to find and develop a relationship with, but I'm not doing too badly," he added with a wink.

"I may go on a mission someday. If the Lord feels a two year mission would be more beneficial than my acting, I would go," Stevens said.

He is excited about life and especially his new TV series, Wonderland Cove.

"I really feel that the Lord had a hand in my getting this new series," he said.

Stevens said his ultimate goal goes beyond acting and its rewards.

"When I leave this life I would like to be known as a good friend," he said, "...whether I'm known as a good actor or singer doesn't really matter. What I want is Shawn Stevens to be remembered as a good guy."

Pioneer hardships disputed in new book by BYU Press

A new book which disputes the popular idea that the pioneer movement was a never-ending catastrophy has been published by the BYU Press.

"Mormon Role in the Settlement of the West" was written by eight scholars of geography and geographical history, and is the ninth publication in the Charles Redd Monographs in Western History.

This informative, humorous and at times controversial book tells of the Latter-day Saint influence upon the settlement of Western America, said Ernest L. Olson, director of the BYU Press.

Beginning with Richard H. Jackson's chapter on the westward trek, the book follows the Mormons as they make their way, directed by Brigham Young, to the Rocky Mountains. Jackson is a geography professor at BYU, and it is his research that disputes the idea that the trek was nothing more than sorrow and disaster.

Dr. Melvin T. Smith, director of the Utah State Historical Society, writes about "Mormon Exploration in the Lower Colorado River Area."

"Defunct Mormon Settlements: 1830-1930," researched by Lynn A. Rosenvall, geography department chairman at the University of Calgary, discusses extinct Mormon settlements.

Other studies included in his history are "Mormon Settlements in its Global Context," by Alan H. Gray, an associate professor at BYU; "Imprints of Agricultural Systems on the Utah Landscape," by Charles S. Peterson, professor of history at Utah State University.

'Watership Down' religious film

by LON WILCOX
Universe Staff Writer

Religions have always their parables to teach the impor- principles of their . The Bible has the ies of the Old Testa- t and the parables of New. There are the hological tales of ece and Rome, the poems of India, and traditions of Asia.

n addition, in- iduals have at- pted to teach higher ciples of living in a less way by clothing n in entertainment. op did it in ancient ece with his fables. is Carroll taught dren while entertain- them with Alice in nderland. Tolkien it for adults in The d of the Rings. And Richard Adams has e it with Watership vn.

he book is a fantasy ut a group of rabbits o face and beat rwhelming odds in r attempt to find a home. By giving m human emotions motives, Adams has sented a moral tale of h principles and rifice.

ow Avo Embassy ures have released animated movie sed on Adams's tseller.

saw this movie with ttle reluctance. After we've been animated t out of our minds by Lord of the Rings, it and Superman e created a real ckbuster of a com- ition in the fantasy d. Would what ap- red to be a simple mation of a simple tasy compete?

Most happily, yes. Watership Down is ply done, but very eshing and most en- aining. The anima- is reminiscent of the lt Disney classics hout being imitative. colors are rich and realistic.

he opening scenes of film are very sym- lic. Much like tching animated aho religious sand ntings. The religious background for the film is thus simply and effectively presented.

My first impression was of a religious odyssey. And so it turns out to be.

In the outskirts of civilization, there is a meadow that contains a prosperous and peaceful rabbit warren. There are no real cares, no overcrowding, no starvation, no overpowering enemies. But one rabbit is most uneasy.

Fiver is a runt, the smallest of his family and closely attached to his brother Hazel. Fiver is a visionary, and something of a prophet. In the setting sun he sees a danger to the warren. Hazel accepts Fiver's warning — he has apparently had them before and been correct — and tries to convince the leaders of the warren to leave, unsuccessfully.

With a small group Hazel and Fiver manage to leave the warren and head into the wilderness, following Fiver's vision of a high hill with dry land, where they can see the whole world and live in peace.

I was greatly reminded of several religious parallels. The brothers, one a prophet, one a leader. The call of warning to the people with only a small group willing to leave and avoid disaster that is not evident. The trek across a wilderness, the promise of a better land, and the need to overcome enemies along the way.

All of these things are familiar to us, but in the way Adams presents them, they become new and moving.

The positive aspects of the movie are many. There are no swear words. Ideals like loyalty, love, freedom and sacrifice are portrayed as worthwhile and worthy of imitation. The music is well suited to the action and the one symbolic scene in the midst of the action is accompanied by a vocal by Art Garfunkel. (Nice, but I haven't heard it on the radio.)

The visionary Fiver is threatened by a member of the warren's officer corps in a scene from Watership Down.

Now for the major drawback.

Watership Down doesn't pull any punches. The ugly in the world is not prettied up, or merely implied. Violence, death and cruelty are graphically shown. Therefore, this is not a movie for small children. Despite the animation and fantasy plot, Watership Down faces the real world with open eyes. Some impressionable children will be scared by what happens and not entertained.

But the college student will relate well with the characters of Hazel, Fiver and Big Wig. The viewer will leave with his basic view of right and wrong replenished and strengthened. Go see it.

Watership Down is playing at the University Mall Theater until Feb. 22.

Mansfield real director of program

A photograph caption on page one in the Thursday edition of The Daily Universe incorrectly named Mike Dyer as director of the BYU Buddy Program. Dyer is a graduate assistant to Erland Peterson. The real director of the program is Kevin L. Mansfield.

The Universe regrets the error.

Need money for school? A low-cost student loan can help! Don't borrow money for school unless you have to. But if you have to, look into the Utah Guaranteed Student Loan Program.

How It Works. You arrange a loan with any lending institution willing to make a student loan. A bank. Savings and loan. Or credit union. (Most are willing to help.)

You can borrow up to $2,500 a year for undergraduate school. Up to $5,000 a year for graduate school.

You won't need any collateral to apply. (The state of Utah guarantees all loans.)

You will pay only 7% annual interest. Well below the usual interest rates for installment loans.

And you won't need to make any payments until you leave school.

If You Are Interested. Application for student loans should be made at least four weeks before the start of a new quarter or semester.

If you have any questions about the program, ask your school's Financial Aid administrator. Or write to the Utah Higher Education Assistance Authority, 807 East South Temple, Salt Lake City, Utah 84103. We'll send you a free pamphlet about the program.
